On advice and counsel

By WILLIAM L. TRIMYER
A WISE COUNSELOR
Lesson for June 12, 1983
Bible Study Passages: Exodus 2:15-3:1; 4:18; 18:13-24
INTRODUCTION

Advice is as cheap as sand. Ask anyone for thier advice concerning a problem you have and you'll likely get an ear full. When you need advice it is best to seek out someone you can trust, someone who will hear you out before they offer to advise you. Bad advice would be like taking the wrong medicine for an illness. Would you take Pepto-Bismol for a headache? Of course not.

Sometimes we all need advice and counsel. We may become so entangled in a web of confusion that we need someone who will help us sort out our problems. Some people seek out a counselor because they want someone to tell them what to do. A good counselor, however, does not tell us the answers; instead, they help us discover the answers.

We can be counselors to one another. If we listen and express our interest we can be of great help to someone who is hurting. This week's lesson looks at how Moses sought and listened to the wise counsel of his father-in-law, Jethro.

A Chance Meeting [Exodus 2:15-3:1]

The story of Moses meeting Jethro is rather interesting. When Moses sought refuge in Midian after killing an Egyptian, he once again intervenes on behalf of some women in distress. The women were being harrassed by shepherds, whereupon Moses came to their defense. As a result, Moses was invited to go home for dinner and meet their father, who was also the priest of Midian.

The story ends with Moses marrying one of Jethro's daughters and working as a shepherd for his father-in-law. Jethro was a religious man, devoted to serving Yahweh. Some have argued that Moses learned a lot about Yahweh from his father-in-law, Jethro.

A Final Parting [Exodus 4:18; 18:1-2]

During his stay in Midian and working as a shepherd, Moses experienced a growing relationship with God. While out in the fields one day he saw a burning bush. Little did Moses know that when he turned aside to see this strange phenomenon, God would commission him to return to Egypt and free the Hebrew slaves.

Moses spent about forty years in Midian. He had developed a comfortable life style, raised a family, and became settled and secure in his desert solitude. It appeared that Moses was in Midian to stay, but following the burning bush experience Moses is commissioned to lead a mass of slaves out of Egypt to forge a new nation under Yahweh.

Helpful Advice [Exodus 18:13-27]

Moses was faced with the awesome task of being a father to many people. He soon discovered that the demands upon his time and emotions were making him weary. Jethro pointed out to Moses that he was commiting "professional suicide" by trying to care for too many people.

Jethro suggested that Moses appoint judges to help settle the concerns of the people. Jethro may have inadvertently saved Moses' life.

It is very easy to become so involved that we lose sight of ourselves. We may spend enormous amounts of time and energy caring for the needs of others and sabotage our own. It is important to monitor our involvements so that we do not take on more than we can physically or emotionally handle. Life pressure is as important as blood pressure, but it isn't as easily measured.

Perhaps we could all use someone like Jethro who will point out to us the dangers of our life styles, attitudes, work habits, and over-indulgences. If we listen and heed their good advice we may save ourselves from illness or early death.
